

Cheryl Bayer Taylor

Actress

Community Volunteer

Animal Lover

Born in St. Louis, Cheryl moved to Warner Robins with her parents after her father returned from World War II. She was raised with values inherent to entrepreneurs of the Greatest Generation specifically a love for community, pets and the arts. In fact, the Warner Robins Little Theatre started in the family's living room, leading to Cheryl's love of performing and becoming a professional actress. After a few years of living in the Big Apple, pursuing her craft and working in theatre with many greats, she eventually moved back to Atlanta and then back home to Warner Robins with her young daughter. Not long after moving back, she remarried and grew her family to what it is today.

Following the examples of her parents, she began volunteering in the community by serving on the boards of Keep Warner Robins Beautiful, Houston County Volunteer Medical Clinic, Warner Robins Little Theatre and Wellston Trees & Greens. Today, she is back acting (and serving) at the Little Theatre and is the Secretary of Wellston Trees & Greens.

Cheryl and Jim, her husband of 40 years, stay busy serving the community and traveling, but always making time for their daughters Claire and Ivy and their granddaughter Mila, and always a dog and cat to fill out their home.
