Winston Churchill once said, "Let Us Go Forward Together". No better example is Wellston Trees & Greens working together with the City of Warner Robins and other community partners to create and sustain Wellston Park. As a founding board member of Wellston Trees and Greens, Art is excited with the future possibilities that working together will realize.

The Air Force brought him here to middle Georgia 32 years ago, and he chose to stay after military retirement as a senior officer to become part of this community. In 2013 he and his business partner founded a non-profit 501(c)3, The Heart of Georgia Energy Coalition which was later converted to Wellston Trees & Greens, Inc. Art had also worked in the Energy Office at Robins Air Force Base and served on the board of directors of the Warner Robins and Houston County Housing Authorities, and currently serves on the board of the Warner Robins Heritage Society.

Having earned a Doctorate in Government, he is currently an adjunct professor at Mercer University in Macon Georgia. He and his wife Paula are living retirement fully having raised two wonderful adult children, Chris and Ashley. Chris is a successful corporate executive in Macon, and Ashley who resides in Florida has recently blessed them with their first grandchild.
